INDEX

ORGANIC

There are additives, or, “organic” wines which are made from organically grown grapes, without any added sulfites ( though naturally occurring sulfites will still be present ).

BIODYNAMIC

Biodynamic is similar to organic farming in that both take place without chemicals, but biodynamic farming incorporates ideas about a vineyard as an ecosystem, and also accounting for things such as astrological influences and lunar cycles. A biodynamic wine means that the grapes are farmed biodynamically, and that the winemaker did not make the wine with any common manipulations such as yeast additions or acidity adjustments. A wine “made from biodynamic grapes” means that a vintner used biodynamically grown grapes, but followed a less strict list of rules in winemaking.

DEMETER INTERNATIONAL

Demeter International is the largest certification organization for biodynamic agriculture, and is one of three predominant organic certifiers. Its name is a reference to Demeter, the Greek goddess of grain and fertility. Demeter Biodynamic Certification is used in over 50 countries to verify that biodynamic products meet international standards in production and processing. The Demeter certification program was established in 1928, and as such was the first ecological label for organically produced foods.

Certification is difficult to come by and must be renewed annually. Demeter’s “biodynamic” certification requires biodiversity and ecosystem preservation, soil husbandry, livestock integration, prohibition of genetically engineered organisms and viewing the farm as a living “holistic organism”. The certification verifies the fulfillment of the standards on behalf of the farmers, which in turn guarantees high quality food products to the consumers. This is rewarded by receiving a higher price for food certified with the “Demeter” label, ranging from 10-30% on average.

SUSTAINABILITY

Sustainability refers to a range of practices that are not only ecologically sound, but also economically viable and socially responsible. ( Sustainable farmers may farm largely organically or biodynamically but have flexibility to choose what works best for their individual property; they may also focus on energy and water conservation, use of renewable resources and other issues ). Some third-party agencies offer sustainability certifications, and many regional industry associations are working on developing clearer standards.

BIODIVERSITY & WINE INITIATIVE

The Biodiversity & Wine Initiative (B.W.I.) is a pioneering conservation partnership with the South African wine industry.

B.W.I. members are wine producers and / or growers who have made a commitment to conserving our unique Cape wine-lands, whilst implementing environmentally responsible management practices both within their cellars and on the farm.

In addition, these producers or growers have fulfilled the stringent B.W.I. Member criteria, established and audited by the B.W.I. committee.

REASONED AGRICULTURE

Reasoned agriculture appeared in the early 1990s and was officially recognised in 2002.

It opposes classic chemical treatments preferring to adapt to the specific situation, by minimising treatments.

As a halfway point between traditional and organic production methods, it uses agropharmaceuticals but not excessively. It is defined as economically feasible wine growing that respects the environment.

The saving in vine treatments revolves around meteorological observation.

The weather, wind, heat and humidity condition the presence of pests or fungus. By anticipating any risks of disease or attacks by pests, we can look just for the right treatment.

In reasoned agriculture, particular attention is paid not only to the choice of the products used but also to the timing of applications.

Advantages can be seen in the grape quality and by taking into account current consumer expectations regarding food and environmental safety.

AGRICONFIANCE

Agriconfiance rewards mainly the qualitative management of farms, traceability and food safety.
